

The Literature of Political Economy: A Classified Catalogue of Select Publications in the Different Departments of That Science, With Historical, Critical and Biographical Notices (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Literature of Political Economy: A Classified Catalogue of Select Publications in the Different Departments of That Science, With Historical, Critical and Biographical Notices Those who have got together a considerable number of works in any department of science or literature, or who have bestowed any pains in tracing its history, can hardly fail to be struck, on the one hand, with the indications and explanations of sound principles and doctrines to be found among its earlier cultivators, and on the other, with the continued revival of exploded errors and fallacies. But if this be true in general, it is most especially so in all that relates to politics and national economy. Writers on such subjects, like those who undertake to instruct or lead the public in other departments of human knowledge, are sometimes imperfectly informed, and sometimes prejudiced, and incapable of communicating any useful information. Exclusive, however, of the common sources of error, there is another which, if not peculiar to those who discuss political questions, is found in them more frequently than in most others, and is far more productive of deceptive and unprincipled works. We allude to the discrepancy which sometimes exists between the real or supposed interests of the writers, or of their employers, and those of the public. Those who cultivate mathematical and physical sciences, or who devote themselves to literature or metaphysics, have rarely any selfish motive to bias their judgment, and to tempt them to conceal or pervert the truth. But it is not so with those who engage in political and economical discussions. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
